

The Testimony of Nature

It is easy enough to declare that “Science” has disproved the existence of God. We are really saying that mere man has disproved the existence of God. But, it comes across so much more authoritative, significant and persuasive to say “Science.” Man’s “science” is only as good as his integrity. No one should seriously state there is no God, because no one knows everything about the universe – visible and invisible.

I, for one, am still trying to comprehend aspects of supposedly elementary physics such as light, gravity, rotation. But I can safely say there is a God, because the “Made in Heaven” label is authentically and observably woven into all of nature’s fabric. If you look closely and carefully, you will see God’s signature everywhere.

"The heavens declare the glory of God; the skies proclaim the work of his hands" (Psalm 19:1).

"... ask the animals, and they will teach you, or the birds of the air, and they will tell you; or speak to the earth, and it will teach you, or let the fish of the sea inform you. Which of all these does not know that the hand of the Lord has done this? In his hand is the life of every creature and the breath of all mankind" (Job 12:7-10).

I suspect that, sometimes, a person’s insistence on proof of God’s existence is not entirely sincere. Some people would rather not be confronted with solid, irrefutable proof. Such people just don’t want to deal with God, period. But, putting God out of my mind will not put him out of existence. While no “proof” is provided, there is the obvious, undeniable mountain of valid evidence to deal with. To doubt it, to ignore it, is unreasonable. This unmistakable, plentiful and trustworthy evidence is designed to point me in the direction of God. Whether or not I proceed toward him is mine to decide, mine to choose. ◇◇
